I would like to dedicate this book to my mother in who is still under the false impression that I graduated from barber school some twenty-seven years ago, and have been gainfully employed in some small, dimly-lit shop in Nutley, New Jersey for these past years.

And to my son, Randy, who on a past visit mentioned he hadn't seen me around the house much and who was somewhat taken aback when I told him I had moved out some thirteen years ago. Randy and I had always been close.

If you have had a humorous, embarrassing, etc. situation in your single life and would like to share it, drop me a line and maybe it will show up in my next book, but no promises. But then you're probably used to that.
